

Protecting Access to Clinics

BACKGROUND: While the handful of murders of abortion doctors and clinic staff have attracted much media attention, family planning clinics report that they frequently experience other serious forms of antiabortion violence. These include bombings, arson and vandalism, as well as violent protests and blockades. In 1994, the federal government enacted the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances (FACE) Act, which prohibits intentional property damage and the use of “force or threat of force or...physical obstruction” to “injure, intimidate or interfere with” someone entering a health care facility. States have taken two approaches designed to protect abortion providers. Some states prohibit specific activities, while others have created floating “bubble zones” of several feet around a person who is within a specific distance of a clinic; protesters are prohibited from crossing into that “bubble zone” without the person’s consent.

HIGHLIGHTS:

- 15 states and the District of Columbia prohibit certain specified actions aimed at abortion providers.
  - 11 of the states and the District of Columbia prohibit blocking the entrance to and egress from clinic facilities.
  - 5 of the states and the District of Columbia prohibit threatening or intimidating staff who provide reproductive health services and/or patients entering the clinic.
  - 3 of the states prohibit property damage to facilities providing reproductive health services.
  - 2 of the states and the District of Columbia prohibit telephone harassment of staff who provide reproductive health services.
  - 4 of the states and the District of Columbia prohibit other specified actions, such as creating excessive noise outside the clinic, possessing or having access to a weapon during a demonstration at a medical facility, trespassing, or releasing a substance that produces noxious odor on clinic premises.
  - 3 of the states have “bubble zones” to protect patients from protestors; 2 states require a protected “bubble zone” around a person within a specific distance of a clinic’s entrance or driveway; 1 state prohibits protestors from coming within a specific distance of the clinic.
